Punjabi charter school readies for first students

■ Organizers emphasize educational excellence, say they will seek diversity in student body

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Organizers are working to convert a building and open a Punjabi-themed charter school this month, on land leased from a Sikh temple on Evergreen Avenue.

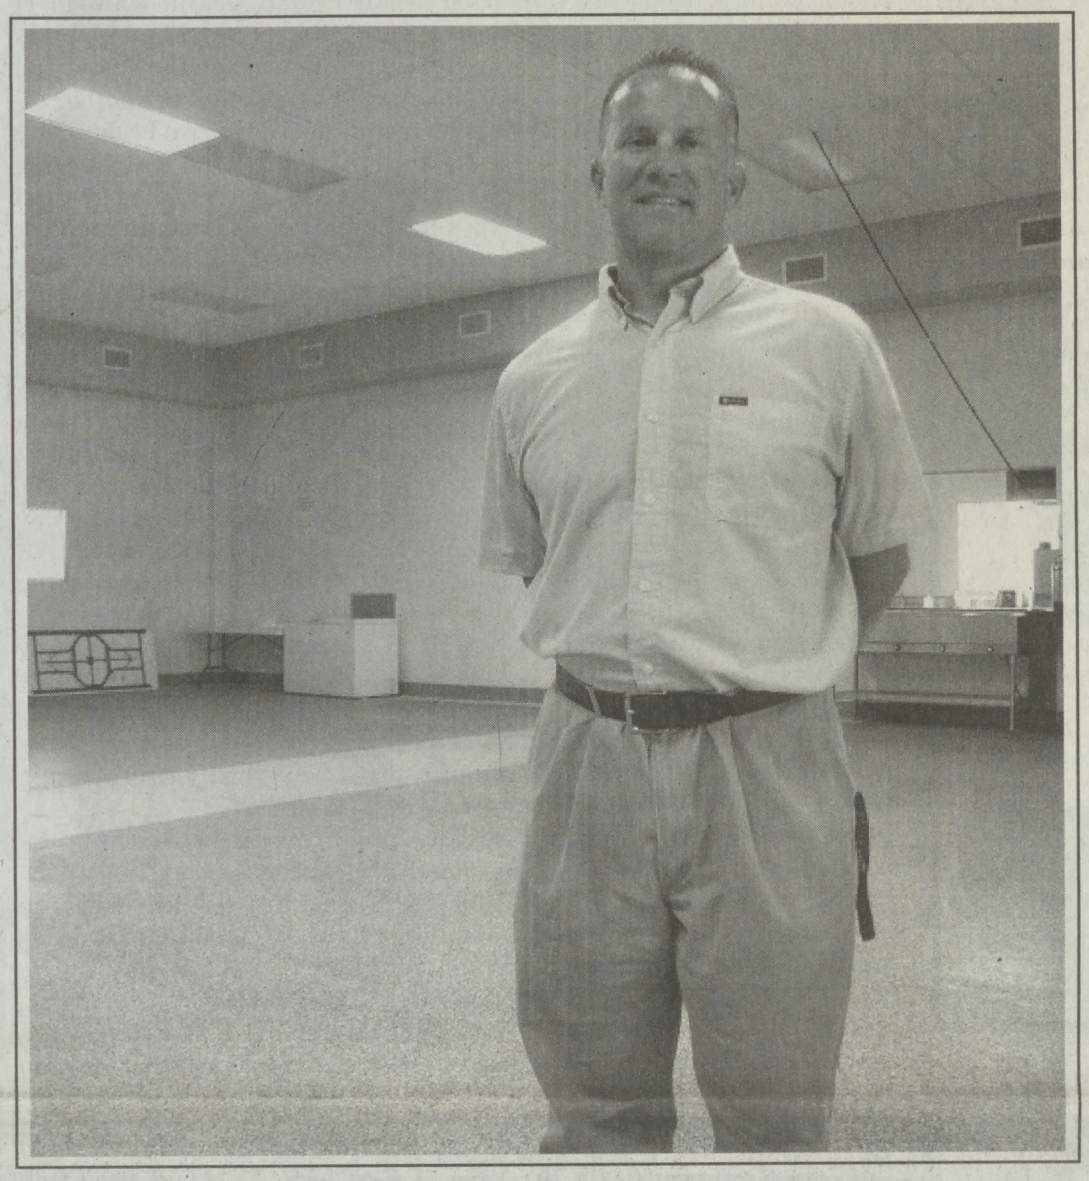
The school was approved by the local Washington Unified school District in June by a 4-1 vote. The lone "no" vote was from board member Adam Menke. He told another newspaper that he preferred that "all these cultures need to be together to work out their similarities and differences," but would support the school since it was the board's decision.

Elsewhere in the Sacramento region, critics have opposed creation of some ethnic-related charter schools.

Charter schools receive public money, and must be open to all races and ethnicities. But they can operate with more autonomy on issues such as the hiring of teachers.

Amar Shergill is a board member of the Sacramento Valley Charter School, as the new facility is called. In an interview with the News-Ledger, he stressed the similarities, and not the differences, from other kindergarten-through-eighth grade schools.

"Like any elementary school, it will primarily be an English language curriculum," said Shergill. "We will add Punjabi (language) for maybe 40 minutes a day. We know that the younger we develop language acquisition, the more amenable a student will be to learning not only that language, but other languages later."



MICHAEL ETTNER is the principal of the new Sacramento Valley Charter School. Here he stands in a building being readied to open as part of the school. August 15 is the target date.

The school is required to meet California curriculum standards. It will attempt to do what most public schools cannot, and keep class sizes at 20 students and lower, he added.

"It's a truism for education that the smaller the class size, the better the outcome. (Also), we have the capability of selecting the best available teachers, regardless of seniority and other issues. We're very happy with the team."

Punjab is a region that stretches from part of India into Pakistan, and Punjabi is the language of the region. Most members of the Sikh religion have roots there, said Shergill, but Sikhs a minority among Muslims, Hindus and others. The new school will strive to include both those with Punjabi ties, and without any connection.

"Diversity in learning can only be an asset," said Shergill. "I don't think it promotes segregation, because we're open to all members of the community."

Another hallmark of the charter school will be to "very vigorously" encourage the students' parents to be involved at the school.

"We're not mandating it, but we expect our parents to provide one day, or seven hours, of work every month. Involvement produces better outcomes. We expect a parent, grandparent, uncle – somebody from each family – to be involved."

This requirement may help ethnic minorities to integrate into West Sacramento and the U.S., he added. If a Sikh immigrant parent from Punjab becomes involved in the school, the experience could provide a "window" for the same person to become more involved in the rest of the local society, Shergill argued.

The school aims for a student body of about 120, beginning with K-6 and adding seventh and eighth grades over the next couple of years.

"In years two, three and four, we expect our educational outcomes to be superior to those of surrounding schools," he predicted.

Applicants won't get preference by having Sikh ties, he added. If there are more applicants than spaces, there will be a lottery, Shergill said.

After a year off, parade & fair will return for 2011

Local scouts helped lead the way in the city's last 'Community Day Parade,' in 2009

West Sacramento's annual "Community Day Parade" and "Neighbors Fair" took a break during 2010 because funding and support were scarce in these tough economic times..

But they're back.

A version of the parade and fair will return this year on Saturday, Oct. 1, along Merkley and West Capitol avenues near city hall.

"The parade will be essentially the same, but with a different route," said one of the organizers, Yaminah Bailey. "And it will be a street-style fair. In earlier years, it had been on the riverfront."

Bailey is a co-coordinator of the West Sacramento Youth Resource Coalation. The group oversees the "Sactown Heroes" local young people who have volunteered at prior parades, and will volunteer again in 2011.

Helping to sponsor the event is a local literacy coalition, which is "a coalition of different groups that provide nonprofit literacy services," said Gabrielle Callison of the local library system. "We plan to have a multicultural event."

The parade was formerly known as West Sacramento's "Community Day Parade."

This year, the combined events will be called the "Multicultural Neighbors Fair and Parade."

The parade will start at 10 a.m. on Merkley Avenue, and pass a judges' stand in front of city hall. At noon, the fair will kick off across the street, on the site behind Walgreens that is currently used for a weekly Thursday night farmers' market.

Volunteers are needed for all kinds of duties, said Callison.

"We need people for basic things like making sure the trash cans aren't overflowing, helping vendors set up, helping with call backs – everything," she said.

What sort of turnout is expected for the parade grounds and fair?

"I'm pretty hopeful we'll have a great turnout," answered Bailey.

For information, visit www.westsacmulticulturalfair.com.

To volunteer, call 375-6469, or show up at an organizational meeting from 9-11 a.m. at the library (1212 Merkley Avenue) on Wed., Aug. 10.

From WSAFCA

West Sacramento Area Flood Control Agency (WSAFCA) and City of West Sacramento officials broke ground July 19 on two levee improvement construction projects costing more than $20 million with funds from an assessment that local property owners approved in 2007 and the Proposition 1E bond act passed by state voters in 2006.

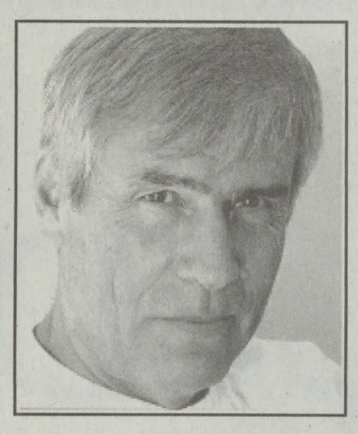
The projects, known as the Rivers Early Implementation Project and CHP Academy Early Implementation Project, were selected because construction can be accomplished on an accelerated timeline to promote public safety and meet stricter standards set forth by the federal government. Together, these projects will reconstruct over 8,000 feet of levee along the Sacramento Bypass and the Sacramento River North Levee.

The groundbreaking celebration included remarks from federal, state and local officials regarding the importance of critical levee infrastructure improvements in the region.

Construction is expected to last from July through December. A construction hotline has been set-up for residents to call with questions and comments at 916-971-2737.

Jogging with werewolves

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Have you ever had someone tell you all about a really vivid dream they had and then want you to interpret it for them? Well, something like that happened to me recently and the conversation went a little something like this:

"You have a degree in psychology, don't you, Daryl?"

"Who told you that?" I asked with interest.

"I think your brother mentioned it to me once."

"Well," I said, "it's not really much of a degree."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Well," I tried to explain, "back when I was going to college, to get a degree in psychology, you had to pass a couple of really hard statistics classes, and as you know, that part of my brain – the part that is responsible for the math stuff – has never properly functioned. So in order to pass those two classes and get my degree, I kinda....well, I kinda had to cheat."

"Really?"

"I'm afraid so."

"And how did you do that?"

"Well, it's a long story," I assured my friend, "but part of it involved dating the smartest, and the least attractive, girl in my statistic classes, so let's just say it wasn't one of my finest hours."

"But to get a psychology degree didn't you also have to study all about dream analysis, too?"

"Yes, there was a class about that, but the professor mumbled a lot so I don't really remember too much about it. Why?"

"Because I had this incredible, crazy dream last night that is still messing with my head and I need someone to help me figure it out."

"Oh," I warned my friend, "I am actually the last person you would want to ask about that, or about anything else related to psychology for that matter. In fact, if the truth be known, when it comes to psychology, I'm a lot like that guy who knows just enough Karate to stroll into a country-western bar and get his butt kicked."

"You seriously can't remember anything that professor taught you about dream analysis?" my friend asked with disbelief.

"Well," I said, "I do remember that he said that all of our dreams are about something we've either done, or want to do, or have seen or heard about others doing. In other words, our brains don't make up brand new stuff all by themselves in our dreams, but rather just mix up a bunch of real or imagined experiences that we've already had."

"That kind of makes sense," said my friend. "So I tell you what, why don't I go ahead and tell you my dream and see if you can make heads or tails out of it?"

I once again repeated the fact that I don't have a clue about why people dream what they do, but he seemed determined to tell me all about his dream, so I politely agreed to listen.

"Okay," he started off, "it's still very confusing to me, but in my dream, while I was sleeping in my bed, I suddenly woke up and decided that I needed to go somewhere, but I didn't know where that somewhere was. But I got up anyway, and the next thing I knew, without even taking the time to put on any clothes, I was outside, and I just started to run. I could see this white farm house off in the distance and I guess I was running towards that. Then the dusty road I was on started heading off in another direction, towards an old wooden bridge off in the distance. A gentle wind was blowing through my hair and I was running free and easy, and no one was chasing after me or anything scary like that. But suddenly, running right next to me – running a little ahead of me actually, like he was in charge of where we were going -- was a wolf. And then, slowly but surely, it turned into more of a human form, like a werewolf. It didn't seem to want to harm me or anything, but rather just run along with me. And another mile or so down the road, a man-sized mummy, all wrapped up in a white cloth of some kind, suddenly appeared, and he started running along with me, too. So there I was, with a werewolf on one side of me and a mummy on the other, just running and running under a really pretty moonlit sky."

'The next thing I knew, without even taking the time to put on any clothes, I was outside, and I just started to run. I could see this white farm house off in the distance and I guess I was running towards that.'

"So," I interrupted, "your dream was basically just about you going jogging with a werewolf and a mummy?"

"Yes, but why in the world would I be doing something as crazy as that?"

"I don't know," I admitted. "Have you been watching too many old Abbott and Costello movies lately?"

"Abbott and Costello movies?"

"You know, those great old black and white comedies where poor Bud and Lou meet up with werewolves and mummies, and Jekyll and Hyde, and the Invisible Man, and all kinds of different ghosts and scary creatures. Now that was one great comedy team! Did you know that at one time back in the 1950s Abbott and Costello movies were so popular that they were the highest paid comedy team in all of America?"

"What are you talking about? I've never even seen a bloody Abbott and Costello movie!"

"Sorry," I said. "I told you I wasn't very good at dream analysis."

"But a crazy dream like that just has to have a meaning," my worried friend assured me.

"I don't know," I said. "I think all of us spend way too much time trying to find the meaning behind everything in life, when in reality, sometimes the answer to something is that there simply isn't any answer."

"But why, even in a dream, would I be buttnaked and out running around in the middle of the night with a werewolf and a mummy?"

"Maybe you just don't like to jog alone," I ventured.

Court warns of scam; D.A. pursues bad checks

The Yolo County Superior Court warns that somebody has been posing as a court employee in Solano County as part of a scam in that region.

The person contacts citizens by cell phones, claims to be from the court's jury services department, and informs the citizen that they have missed their jury date. The suspect then asks for the person's address and social security number in order to clear up the "failure to appear."

California superior court personnel will never call citizens to ask for financial information or personal information, said a spokesperson for Yolo, and citizens should never give such information over the phone to someone claiming to be from the courts.

If you receive a suspicious call from someone claiming to be from the Yolo court, you're asked to call Yolo County Jury Services at 9530) 406-6828.

The Yolo County District Attorney's office has a "check prosecution program" designed to help merchants and residents recover funds from people who wrote bad checks.

For the month of July, the unit recovered $46,330.11 for victims of bad checks, reports the D.A.'s office.

If businesses or individuals receive a bad check and can't get cooperation from the writer, they can contact the program at (530) 666-8200 or visit it at 301 Second Street, Woodland. Forms are also available at local chambers of commerce, and at www.yolocounty.org/Index.aspx?page=757.

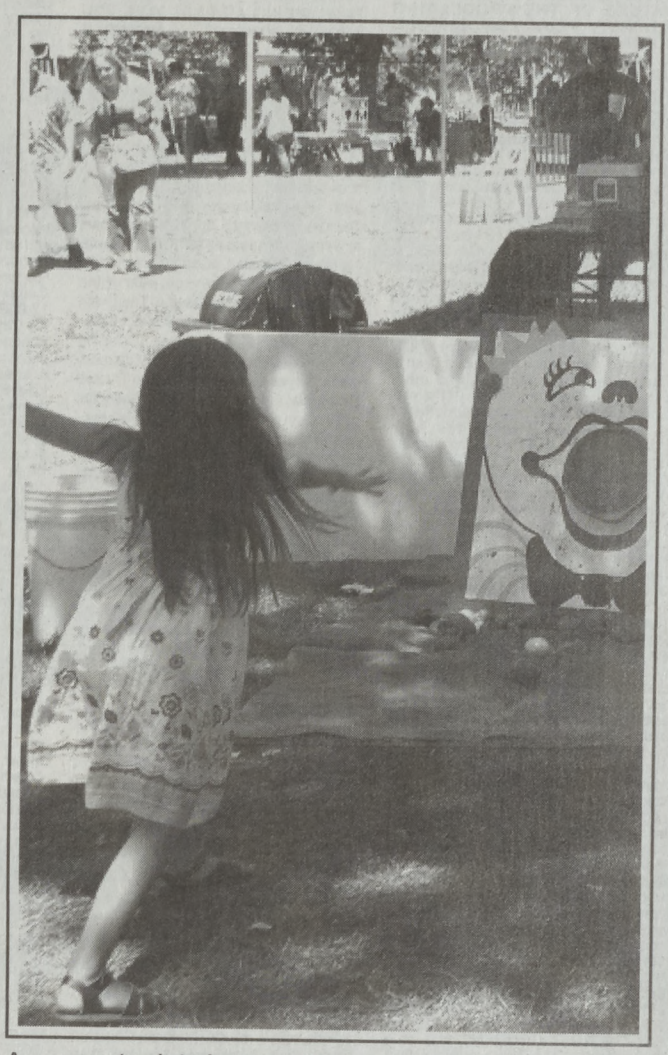
Tomato time



A youngster lets loose with an overripe tomato at a tomato-throwing event from last year's festival (courtesy of Woodland Tomato Festival)

The "Tomato Festival" returns to Woodland this year on Sat., Aug. 13.

The event will feature a restaurant salsa competition, a "Top Tomato" chef competition, a public tomato tasting, live entertainment, children's activities and fresh produce for sale. It will be held at Freeman Park (Main Street at 6th) from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Yolo County Master Gardeners will invite people to vote on the best-tasting Yolo-grown tomatoes.

Sonia Mora, a member of the festival steering committee, said that mild weather has slowed the ripening of the local garden favorite.

"It's been a late start for tomatoes this year with the weather not cooperating," she said. "But we're finally starting to see them appear at the (Farmers) Market and they'll be beautiful at the festival.

GO FIGURE!

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEWS

BY SAM STRUCKHOFF

EDITOR'S NOTE: DVDs reviewed in this column will be available in stores the week of Aug. 8, 2011.

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Paul" (R) -- While on a UFO-centric road trip through the U.S., two geeks (Simon Pegg and Nick Frost) find Paul, a friendly little alien voiced by Seth Rogen. Movie references, snappy dialog and solid comedic performances drive the movie along for a fun ride.

For an alien, Paul has a firm grasp on Earth's pop culture and makes wisecracks the whole way through. Pegg and Frost are a seasoned comedy duo and carry the leading roles well. The film also boasts a winning supporting cast and fine special effects. The movie gets an R rating for some over-the-top humor and Paul's stoner antics, yet the movie has heart. Paul is the movie for anyone who fondly remembers the kid-befriends-alien story of "E.T." and wants to be enchanted all over again, but this time with a ridiculous buddy-comedy.

"Super" (R) -- When his beautiful wife leaves him and falls in with the wrong crowd, Frank (Rainn Wilson from TV's "The Office") turns himself into a real-world superhero and goes on a crusade against crime. However, the real conflict of this quirky-yet-dark comedy is whether Frank is a sympathetic underdog or a deranged lunatic assaulting perceived evil with a pipe wrench.

He's both. It's the madness that makes him lovable, and Wilson handles it well. Be warned; as the plot thickens, the violence increases exponentially. "Super" makes for a strange movie full of laugh-out-loud moments and awkward winces.

"The Battle of Algiers" [Blu-ray] (1966) -- This black-and-white classic gives an unflinching look at war from both sides. "The Battle of Algiers" was recognized for its achievements in its own time, and still holds political relevance 45 years later. Depicting Algeria's struggle for independence from France, the film follows the conflict from resentment on the streets to full-blown urban warfare. The battlefield is masterfully humanized through character vignettes and the tempo of escalating tensions. The Blu-ray release from the Criterion Collection offers the chance to see a truly poignant and classic film restored.

DOG OF THE WEEK

"Mars Needs Moms" (PG) - No amount of space-age animation technology could turn this unlovable kid-movie flop into an engaging adventure. The story follows young Milo, a 9-year-old boy who doesn't always listen to his mother. When Milo witnesses Martians kidnapping his mom, he finds himself on an outer-space journey to stop the Martian mom-napping campaign.

The plot is simple and goofy enough, but the script doesn't really take it anywhere good, and the animation keeps anyone from getting comfortable. See, the motion-capture animation used in the film converts actors' performances into unsettling computer animated characters. This leaves all the humans looking like demon-touched dolls struggling to adapt to humanoid expression. In a time when studios are raising the bar for animated family features, "Mars Needs Moms" fails to lift off.

"The Essential Sopranos Reader"
Edited by David Lavery, Douglas L. Howard and Paul Levinson
(University Press of Kentucky, $60)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

"The Sopranos" premiered in January 1999 on HBO, and during its six seasons captured an astonishing 21 Emmys and five Golden Globes. It was hailed by Stephen Holden of The New York Times as possibly "the greatest work of American popular culture of the last quarter century."

The series helped redefine American television. It gave credibility to HBO and cable TV, and even four years after the last episode aired, continues to influence the way television narratives are developed and produced.

"The Essential Sopranos Reader" explores the series' themes, its legacy, its unforgettable characters and how its writers and producers handled some of the most controversial subject matter ever seen on American TV.

Three professors -- David Lavery of MTSU, Douglas L. Howard of Suffolk Community College and Paul Levinson of Fordham -- have compiled critical commentary that details how the groundbreaking series came about, its impact both then and now, and even how the show portrayed both gender and sexuality.

Contributors include such heavy hitters as Frank P. Tomasulo, who addresses the representation of Italian Americans in the series; Gary Edgerton, who delves into the role the episodes had in making HBO a cable TV powerhouse; and Sicilian Mafia jurists Antonio Ingroia and Fabio Licata, who consider the show in light of their own experiences with organized-crime litigation. Of special interest is a printed interview with actor Dominic Chianese, "Uncle Junior" Soprano in the series, who reveals his experiences during the show's filming.

In addition to the essays, there is a full episode guide for all six seasons, and even an extensive list of the final season's various allusions and intertextual references. This is the first major academic exploration of the series, and it is must reading for both fans and scholars of "The Sopranos."

A Summer Sandwich With an Asian Twist

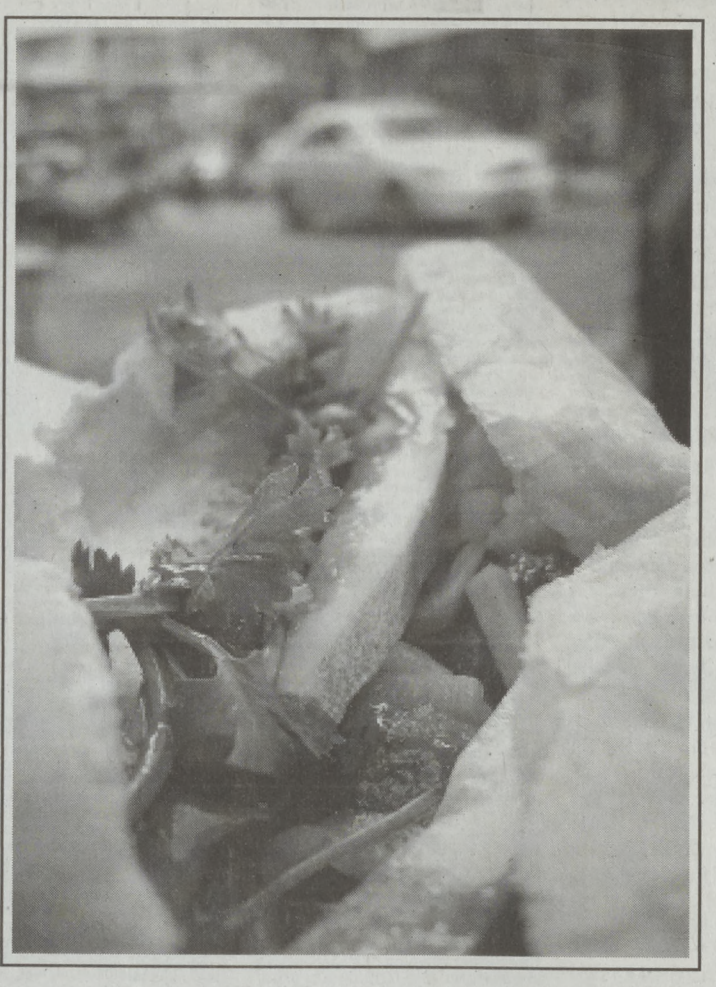
A sandwich is the perfect way to enjoy a simple yet filling meal on a hot summer day. If your taste buds are tired of traditional fare, it's time to explore sandwiches from other cultures.

A modern Vietnamese bahn mi sandwich is a delicious melding of Asian spices and ingredients encased in a French baguette. The original components of the banh mi (pronounced BUN-mee) were introduced in the early 20th century by the French to Saigon (renamed Ho Chi Minh City in 1976). A traditional, French-style banh mi consisted of buttered baguettes that the locals called banh tay (literally, "foreign cake") and ham or p%ot•. As time went on, the bahn mi took on a decidedly Asian flair.

The Vietnamese version of the bahn mi sandwich became more complex and contained a variety of meats including sardines, shredded chicken, grilled pork patties, barbequed meatballs, fried eggs and bean curd. You can purchase a bahn mi wrapped in scraps of paper with a rubber band securing all the delicious ingredients from street vendors or at a restaurant.

The banh mi, along with its unique variations, migrated to America along with the Vietnamese families who fled the country in the 1960s and '70s during the war. They combined the traditional bahn mi with ingredients they found in their new home.

Today, a variety of bahn mi sandwiches are available, from barbequed pork to vegetarian tofu versions topped with a marinated vegetables, spicy chili sauce, soy sauce and mayonnaise, and encased in a warm baguette or a flour tortilla. If a Vietnamese bahn mi sandwich isn't sold in your area, you can make them at home using this wonderful recipe for Shrimp Bahn Mi.



SHRIMP BAHN MI

You can make the crunchy, marinated carrot topping for this traditional sandwich ahead of time and store it in an airtight container. If daikon radish isn't available in your area, use 1/4 cup peeled and shredded red radish as a substitute.

1/2 cup carrots, peeled and shredded
1/2 cup daikon or red radish, peeled and shredded
2 teaspoons sugar or sugar substitute
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon cider vinegar
1/3 cup chopped fresh cilantro
2 1/2 tablespoons reduced-fat mayonnaise
2 1/2 tablespoons low-fat plain Greek yogurt
1 tablespoon soy sauce
3/4 teaspoon fish sauce
1 tablespoon lime juice
1 teaspoon Sriracha sauce, or 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
3 (12-inch) baguettes, halved lengthwise
1 pound peeled, cooked (16-20 count) shrimp, tails removed, cut in half
18 thin slices of cucumber
3 scallions, thinly sliced lengthwise and cut into 2-inch pieces
1 kiwi, thinly sliced, optional

1. Place carrot, radish, sugar, salt and vinegar in a small bowl; stir to combine. Let marinate while preparing the rest of the ingredients.
2. Place cilantro, mayonnaise, yogurt, soy sauce, fish sauce, lime juice and Sriracha or the cayenne in a medium bowl; stir to combine. Spread 2 teaspoons of this sauce on the bottom half of each baguette. Add shrimp to the remaining sauce; toss to coat.
3. Using a slotted spoon, divide carrot mixture among the baguettes (discard vinegar). Top with shrimp, cucumber, scallions and the kiwi fruit slices, if desired. Cut each baguette into two 6-inch sandwiches. Serves 6.

'GOOD HOUSEKEEPING': Picnic Potato Salad

Potato salad is always a hit at a casual barbecue, and this simple recipe of red-skinned potatoes with a tangy mayonnaise dressing is a winner! Our secret? First toss the warm potatoes with a vinaigrette so they can absorb lots of flavor, then stir with the creamy dressing to coat.

3 pounds (about 12) medium red-skin potatoes, cut into 1-inch chunks
1/4 cup distilled white vinegar
1 tablespoon olive oil
2 teaspoons spicy brown mustard
1 1/4 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/3 cup whole milk
2 small celery stalks, thinly sliced
2 green onions, minced

1. In 5- to 6-quart saucepot, place potatoes and enough water to cover; heat to boiling over high heat. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 8 to 10 minutes or until potatoes are fork-tender.
2. Meanwhile, in large bowl, with wire whisk, mix vinegar, oil, mustard, salt and pepper.
3. Drain potatoes. Add hot potatoes to bowl with vinaigrette; gently stir with rubber spatula until evenly coated and vinaigrette is absorbed. Cool 15 minutes.
4. In small bowl, with wire whisk, mix mayonnaise and milk until smooth. Add mayonnaise mixture, celery and green onions to potatoes. Gently stir with rubber spatula until mixed. Serve warm or cover and refrigerate up to 1 day. Yields 12 (2/3 cup) servings.
